FOOD SAFETY SUPERVISOR TRAINING

The new Food Amendment (Food Safety Supervisor) Act 2009 requires proprietors of food businesses in the NSW hospitality and retail food service sector to appoint a Food Safety Supervisor (FSS).

Under the Act, Food Safety Supervisors (FSS) must hold a food safety supervisor certificate and have the authority to supervise the relevant food handling activities and ensure that the handling is done safely.

The NSW Food Authority has allowed an implementation period during which businesses will have 12 months to appoint a Food Safety Supervisor.

Each appointed Food Safety Supervisor (FSS) will need to receive training in certain nationally recognised units of competency and hold a FSS certificate.

Food Safety Certificates can only be issued by a training provider who is approved by NSW Food Authority.

If you have not yet trained your Food Safety Supervisors - the implementation period expires in September 2011

SO TIME IS RUNNING OUT!

TDA will run half day courses every week for a limited time in order to train Food Safety Supervisors
